Angus was massive in Bris Vegas. I remember him from the early 90's. Without disrespect, what happened to him?

What I've just now seen, is one of the worlds grandest old-school style turntablist videos that rose from the lost treasure chest of hip-hop. Thanks,djsheep! Your homeboy's got the skills to pay the bills. Excellent video!

What a shame yet another talent lost from the 80's. I knew B from the coffee shop dayz aswell the alarm with rex and malcom .I membr at the beat I was bside him up at the deckz he was blown a joint in one hand and scratchin in the other and he had the place rockin! I lost contact due to my years away, could some tell me how he passed away ? I hope it waznt the white bitch as she seems to get most of us. REST IN PEACE YOUR MEMORIES WILL LIVE 4 EVA

Hi thirdbourne, the place was Hot Gossip which later became Lexington Queen which is now correct me if im wrong anyone? Girlsrigs. It is situation on the Albert St leg of the Queen St Mall area. The entrance still looks exactly the same as it did then.

It was actually somewhere down the Gold Coast, can't remember the name off hand right now, but I'll find out. Looked like Hot Gossip tho....

Angus my brother,
I will remember the first lesson you taught me is that this hip hop thing is all about family and unity the lost elements
